No. . . we haven't forgotten about you, which is the answer to your question concerning our recent period of silence.

The HEAD EAST Organization values your dedicated support and we're more than excited to bring our Fan Club members advance notice of an internal up-surge that will both shock and win over multitudes of people in the rock music community world-wide. The HEAD EAST Fan Club is not a fraternity exclusive to the United States anymore. The Club became International when the release of the band's sixth album, "A Different Kind of Crazy," generated interest in West Germany, Poland, Japan, England, Belgium, and Mexico, just to name a few.

It was the desire of this Midwestern quintet to keep this secret exactly that way until things were ready to be publicly unveiled. But as a member in good standing (or soon to be one), you are privileged to hear the news from the source before the press is notified and is common knowledge to everyone.

The close of the "Crazy Tour" earlier this year brought the first personnel change ever in HEAD EAST's history. As soon as one member in this nation's touring-est band announced his resignation, two others decided this cue was the appropriate time they had been waiting for and subsequently announced theirs as well. In alphabetical order, those departing HEAD EAST in pursuit of solo careers are bassist Dan Birney, lead vocalist John Schlitt and guitarist Mike Somerville. Maintaining the essence of the old HEAD EAST and launching the essence of the new, are charismatic drummer, Steve "Yat Man" Huston and never-tiring keyboardist Roger Boyd.

Replacing in some ways and picking up in other ways where the three former members had left off, are: lead vocalist Danny Odum, bassist Mark Boatman and guitarist Tony Gross.

HEAD EAST's seventh album on A & M Records is entitled "U. S. #1." The album was recorded at Longview Studios in Boston and projects the band's Rock and Roll course into mass appeal without jeopardizing any of the band's integrity. A single entitled "You'll Be the One" is being released August 10 with the album hitting record store racks on September 10.

You've grown with us in the past. Watch now as WE grow with YOU on our side.
